ARGUMENT IN THE VITRIOL THROW-ING SENSATION.

Mrs. Ruddick, a Spiritualistic Medium Testifies Against the Defendant.

The argument in the case against Mrs Maud Goodin, charged with being the chief conspirator in the plot to injure Dr. Aimee Haskinson, began yesterday afternoon. The state produced another new witness yesterday morning. This was Mrs. Frances Ruddick, a spiritualistic medium, who testified that in May, 1898, a short time before the vitriol was thrown on Miss Haskinson, Mrs. Goodin and her daughter came to witness's house and Mrs. Goodin asserted James Van Natta was "going with" a doctor, explaining that it was a woman doctor. Mrs. Goodin, the witness said, declared that she did not intend to lose Van Natta. This evidence was in rebuttal, Mrs. Goodin having testified that she "broke off" with Van Natta in April, 1898, and had no interest in him at the time the assault was made on Miss Haskinson.

Yesterday afternoon Prosecuting Attorney Pugh made the opening argument for the state. He went into the state's evidence in detail, referring to the testimony of the defense in a general way. Mr. Pugh made a strong argument. He introduced a new theory in reference to the alleged plot to assassinate Dr. Haskinson in the house on West New York street. Early in the trial witnesses testified that a few weeks before the vitriol was thrown on Dr. Haskinson, Mrs. Goodin and Mrs. Lulu Kline went to a house on West New York street and rented a room for the night. It was claimed that Mrs. Goodin was disguised and posed as the aged mother of her companion. There was estimony to the effect that the women had two boxes of acid, a revolver and a razor. According to the evidence, Mrs. Kline was | Stegall against the Baltimore & Ohio Southto bring Dr. Haskinson to the house to see her mother, who was very ill. As soon as the doctor arrived she was to be murdered. David Robinet against the same road for as disclosed by the evidence, Mrs. Kline re fused to go for Dr. Haskinson.

Mr. Pugh in his argument declared that he did not believe Mrs. Goodin meant to have Miss Haskinson come to the New Yorkstreet house that night, and in fact did not mean to harm her then. In the opinion of | for $1,999, was received from Floyd county. the attorney. Already having Mrs. Kline under her influence, she wanted to inspire her with

AN UNUSUAL FAMILY STORY. Mystery as to How Mrs. Horea Received $800.

A suit to set aside a real estate conveyance, which went to trial before Judge Car- | heard, ter, of the Superior Court, yesterday afternoon promises to develop some sensational testimony. The amount involved is about $600. The plaintiffs are Swift & Co. and Armour & Co., Chicago pork packers. They are suing John Horea and Emma Feier for the purpose of recovering money alleged to be due from Horea for meats sold him while he was engaged in conducting a meat market in Chicago. Horea and Mrs. Feier were formerly husband and wife. It is sought to set aside a conveyance of real estate which Horea made to the woman while she was his wife. The property is situated on East Georgia street, this city, and is at present occupied by Mrs. Feier and her present husband. Horea lives in Chicago, but he and his former wife were residents of this city prior to 1893, when they moved to Chi-

The statement made by the attorneys to the court yesterday developed the fact that shortly after Horea and his wife went to Chicago the husband formed the acquaintance of Mrs. Anna Hermann, the wife of saloon keeper. Horea, it is claimed, became too friendly with this woman to suit his wife and they had frequant quarrels as a result of the husband's conduct. It is devotion to Mrs. Hermann finally led to an estrangement between him and his wife. but after a time they partly made up their differences. Horea, it is alleged, said to his wife that he was willing to come back to her, but it would be necessary for him to get away from Chicago, away from the inuence of the Hermann woman. It is asserted that Horea then explained to his wife that he was indebted to his uncle who resided at Brookville, Ind., and he proposed to his wife that if she would convey certain property which was in her name to the uncle in payment of the debt they would go away from Chicago and begin life anew. The wife, it appears, was yet sus-picious of her husband's motives and declined to make this conveyance unless he averred, Mrs. Horea learned that her husband was preparing to elope with the Her-mann woman and she had him arrested and placed under a $5,000 bond, this being the only way to prevent his leaving the city. A few days after his arrest, according to the attorneys, Horea met his wife and induced her to withdraw the proceedings against him, promising that he would give up the other woman. He said further that they would quit Chicago and move to Brookville. Mrs. Horea, it is recited, dismissed the proceedings and her husband left Chicago. It was the understanding, her attorney claims, that Horea was to go to Brookville and get started into husband and then ville and get started into business and then his wife and children would follow. Mrs. Horea received two or three letters from her husband and she wrote to him several times. Finally her letters began coming back from Brookville unopened. She back again grew suspicious and came down to the Indiana town in search of her husband. fid not find him, but found his uncle. The latter told her that her husband had been there, and was accompanied by the Hermann woman. He said they had left together and he understood that they had gone to New York. It is claimed that Horea's uncle, when he heard the wife's story, reconveyed to her the property she had deeded to him. Mrs. Horea went back to Chicago and after procuring a divorce was married to her present husband. On the witness stand yesterday evening Horea made the bold assertion that he conveyed the Indianapolis property to his wife for the purpose of defrauding the plaintiffs. The attorneys for his former wife say he is anxious to have the conveyance set aside so that his debts will have to be paid out of her property.

Some time ago an examination before trial was held in the office of the plaintiffs' attorneys, and Mrs. Horea was asked as to certain money she had given her former husband. The amount was about $800. She admitted that she had turned over this money to Horea while they were living to-gether, but declined to tell how she rame into possession of it. She refused to make this explanation on the advice of her attorney on the ground that her statement would tend to subject her to a criminal prosecution. It is intimated that there are ome sensational facts connected with this feature of the case which will probably not be brought out in this trial. Among the attorneys interested in the case are Chambers, Pickens & Moores, Morris, Newberger & Curtis, Clifford, Browder & Moffett and two

Each patron of the gur-reat national game, as exemplified at the Ohio-street home of gayety and spheroidal manipulations, received, as he passed through the gates, a nice, new rain check, on which was printed in fat black figures the number of the room occupied by Jonah in the commissary department of the whale. Needless to tell the dear reader who is up in his scriptural history or the science of hoodoos that "13" was the fateful it. The ground was wet, slippery and sticky withal, and the base runners and fielders accumulated great gobs of Indiana's sacred soil on their spikes as they hastened them around the course. Everybody was handicapped, and the man with the biggest feet-his name shall not be mentioned here -carried the most weight. The Game Next Sunday. Mayor Taggart in all probability will ask City Attorney Kern for an opinion in the Sunday baseball case either to-day or tomorrow. A game is scheduled for Sunday afternoon between the Indianapolis and Kansas City clubs, and, unless the city authorities take some action towards preventing it, the game will take place as adver-tised. Mr. Kern said yesterday that the mayor had not asked for an opinion as yet, out would probably do so within the next forty-eight hours. If the game is permitted Sunday, it is claimed, a citizens' league will be formed by a number of men, who have always bitterly opposed Sunday games, and the players will be prosecuted in the future if they take part in any further baseball sport on the Sabbath.

PAPERS READ BY SURGEONS. Appendicitis and Other Intestinal

Troubles Discussed. CHICAGO, June 1 .- Appendicitis was the subject of discussion at to-day's meeting of the American Surgical Association. Dr. M. H. Richardson, of Boston, stated that as a rule the appendix should be removed if the diagnosis was made in the first hours of the attack; also, that an operation was advisable if the symptoms recurred after an im-provement. He declared the wisdom of an operation was questionable in severe cases or in cases which were on the edge. An animated discussion followed Dr. Richardson's address, in which Dr. J. B. Weaver of Philadelphia, Dr. Christian Fenger of Chicago, and Dr. F. B. Hardington of Boston participated. A paper on "The Technique of Intestinal Anastomosis" was read by Dr. Robert F. Weir, of New York, followed with brief discussions.
